

GAVIN K. WATT UE

HONORARY VICE-PRESIDENT UELAC - 2000

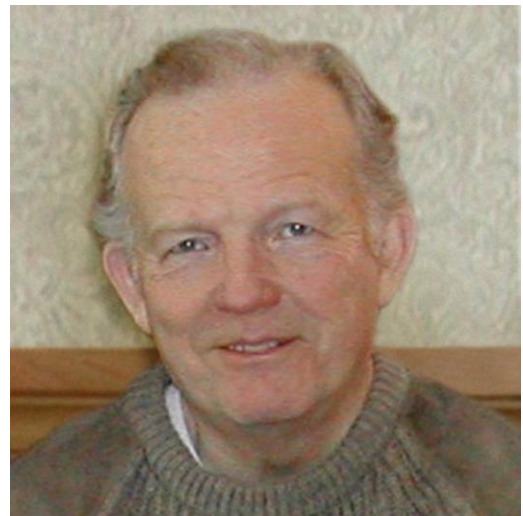

For his considerable contribution to the development of the knowledge of the United Empire Loyalist epoch, Gavin Watt was declared an Honorary Vice-President of UELAC in the AGM of the “Defending the Empire” Conference held at the Renaissance Hotel Fallsview, Niagara Falls, Ontario in 2000.

He continues to serve the UELAC as a valued resource for the KRNNY, Loyalist operations in the American Revolution and Loyalist heritage.

BIOGRAPHY

Gavin is a retired Sales and Marketing executive with a BASc degree from the University of Toronto in Engineering and Business. He was born in Toronto in 1937 and grew up at the north end’s City Limits. He met his wife Gill in Sunday school when they were eight and they were married fourteen years later. He has a family of three – two daughters and a son who are devoted historians.

After ten years in the paints and plastics industries, he joined a flexible packaging company and, in 1989, was part way through an MBA equivalent when he was flushed out of a 19-year career. So, he decided to pursue his post-retirement plan to write Canadian military history – albeit a bit sooner than expected.

Gavin Watt as Brigadier of the Northern Brigade

This was not as illogical as it might appear. In the midst of fathering a family, leading a sales force, heading a shooting club and a reenactment regiment, in 1984, he republished Ernest Cruikshank’s regimental history of the King’s Royal Regiment of New York to which he had added a detailed master roll of the 1,500 men who had served and several images of related artifacts.

To get that first book off the ground, there had been many, many weekend visits to the Metro Toronto Research Library and Archives Ontario and some pilgrimages to Library and Archives Canada. He read a great many books and quickly developed a wide network of amateur and professional historian friends who were pleased to share their findings. His personal library and collection of documents grew and grew.

One of the wonderful benefits from reenacting was his acquaintance with American historians who were every bit as passionate about their Revolution as Gavin was about their rebellion. With his concentration on British and Canadian source materials, his books might have exhibited the jingoistic style of so many American accounts; however, his friends' contributions to his research enabled him to write evenhandedly, which has been very well received by most readers.

His engineering and business training and years of writing sales and marketing reports paid off. Research continued apace which led to a series of books. These have been acknowledged as well-researched and easy to read.

Currently, he is working on his next book – a study of the North Americans who supported John Burgoyne's expedition of 1777.
